St Peter's old boys donate computers to school

THE 1973/1975-year group of the St Peter's Senior High School (SHS) Old Boys' Association, with donor support from Australia, New Zealand Foods Standard Agency, has donated 30 desktop computers to the school.

The donation, worth over $150,000 was to promote the effective teaching and learning of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) as an elective subject in the school.

At a short ceremony to present the computers to the school, Mr Jonathan Amakye-Anim, the President of the association, said the kind gesture was to help equip the school's computer laboratory to ensure that each and every student had access to a computer during ICT lessons.

Regular donations

With the welfare of the school at heart, he said the association had planned to assist the school with regular donations.

He said although other year groups were trying their best to support the school in diverse ways, there was still a lot to be done in order to raise the level of the school to a befitting standard.

Mr Amakye-Anim said the group had planned to liaise with other donors, philanthropists and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) to equip the school's science laboratory for students to have their practical lessons after studying the theory.

He, therefore, called on other old boys who had not yet joined the association to endeavour to join to help develop the school.

Receiving the items on behalf of the school, Mr Mathias Tsatsu Komla Kudiabor, the Headmaster of the school, expressed gratitude to the year group and the donors for the presentation and gave an assurance that the computers would be put to their rightful use.

He charged the teachers and the students to take good care of the computers to ensure a long lifespan for other students to also benefit from them. — GNA
